Presenting The Lion of 1949

Spring comes to R. L. H. S.

The Lion of 1949

PUBLISHED BY

To our readers . . . . .

All of us come to the point at some time or other that we like to reminisce, and in so doing feel that our experiences form a worthy basis for advice to others. Just so the seniors. However, realizing that our successors will undoubtedly feel the same in a few short months, we have cushioned our opinions and resort mainly to recollections.

May you gather some impression of our four happy years at R. L. H. S., and particularly our last year, from these pages of our '49 LION.

The Lion 1949 Annual of

Red Lion High School

Red Lion, Pennsylvania

Dear Underclassmen,

Ah, at last we're seniors! But will we ever forget the fun, embarrassment, and trouble we had as underclassmen? Maybe some of the photographs included with this letter will help you remember the incidents. I know you won't recall exactly what the jokes were, but they caused two reactions in study hall - a snicker from the student and a frown from the teacher.

Ah, yes, those were the good old days! Some of us, however, are too anxious to leave school. Robert Graham certainly must have been, the day he rushed into the homeroom, donned his coat and hat, and then realized that he still had another class to attend. What a disappointment that must have been!

Juniors . . . . .

Class Officers—Charles Hartman, president; Dorcas LaMotte, treasurer; Joan Miller, secretary; Gene Neff, vice-president.

Sweet sixteen! Ah yes, the junior year in high school . . . the year when one is really important as an upperclassman, but is spared the responsibilities and duties of a senior.

'Twas with an enrollment of 130 that the Class of 1950 returned to the routine of school life in the fall of 1948. Although a hard-working (?) group and greatly interested in school activities, these eleventh graders do not always think of the serious side of school. They find opportunities for gay moments—in class and elsewhere. They go headlong for anything new—new ideas, fads (witness the blonde front locks), even new subjects. Take for instance, French. Believe it or not, they think it's wonderful. Meet a junior French student and meet the French language—correct or otherwise.

Most juniors agree that high school days pass all too quickly, and that the senior year will be extremely short; so, they endeavor to crowd in all the pleasures possible against that future time when they too look to graduation.

Sophomores . . . . .

Class Officers—Doris Gruver, treasurer; Doris Poet, president; Becky Stabley, secretary; Mervin Grove, vice-president.

The one hundred and seventy sophomores who moved into rooms 2, 2B, 3B, and 4B last September are quite changed from these same persons of a year ago. Having shed their cocoons they vary their moods from silliness to sophistication. But after all, that's just a natural part of the ups and downs of growing up and being a sophomore.

Don't misunderstand. Those stacks of books that occupy the arms of homeward-bound sophs serve a purpose other than helping them sit higher at the table. Occasionally a fevered brow turns to a Latin notebook or an American history book, especially when a large economy size test has been predicted.

The low absentee rate proves that these tenth graders would rather suffer in school than at home. Maybe it's their great love for extra-curricular activities that keeps them so vivacious. At any rate these students who hope to graduate in the spring of '51 are much in evidence.

Did you notice the number of people wandering aimlessly about in the halls of our alma mater during the first few days of school? It wasn't that these students didn't know where to go, it's just that they couldn't get there. Maybe a lost and found department for these people would help the situation. Those silent little greenies in junior high certainly did set an example as far as conduct and quietness are concerned.

But, hold your hats! The atomic bomb resembled a small firecracker when these ambitious students got acquainted with the proceedings of the school. At the athletic contests the noise and hot air given off by these young rooters could be excelled by nothing. Occasionally the teachers felt this way about some of them in the classrooms also.

Being progressive students, these seniors of tomorrow formed their own clubs and other organizations, and they really did a bang-up job in making them successful.

ADMINISTRATION

The Lion 1949 Annual of

Red Lion High School

Red Lion, Pennsylvania

Four years of classes and studying(?) Four years of trying to get teachers to appreciate our perfectly good alibis. But tucked away in our mental pigeon holes along with theorems, formulas, and verb conjugations, are the spicy incidents that really made our "book-learning" stick.

It's no wonder that Mr. Beckley occasionally lost his patience with our class. Imagine asking a student to name, off hand, a reaction of hydrochloric acid and receiving an answer like the one Nevin Trout gave, "Off hand!"

Then there was the water pistol fad last year that caused Blair Barshinger some embarrassment in Mr. Meyer's history class. It's almost uncanny the way some teachers can return to the room at precisely the right (or shall we say the wrong) moment!

Administration . . . . .

All morning the ladies and gentlemen who compose the faculty try to teach us the facts of our textbooks. Then the noon hour comes. Oh, what a relief to get away and have a talk with people possessing a knowledge more equal to their own. The women usually can be found in the library having a nice time talking about the things women are usually caught talking about. The male division can be found downstairs in the boiler room. But then the bell rings and again they're back to work.

Our principal, supervising principal, and school board are the heads of our school. From out of the smoke of their meetings rise the decisions for the directing of our school. They fill teacher vacancies, they supply necessary equipment for student needs, and render sundry other services.

In summing up, we have the faculty plus the principal plus the supervising principal plus the school board equal to the administration of Red Lion High School.

Mr. Moore, high school principal, and Mr. Kulp, supervising principal, get their heads together to iron out an educational technicality.

Board of Education at monthly meeting—Mr David R. Fink, Mr. Earl Hartman, Mr. Thoma Holtzinger, Mr. Edward Landis, and Mr Charles Horn.

Never a dull moment for the busy office secretaries, Miss Smith and Mrs. Gilbert. As soon as they give forth a sigh of relief that routine work is cleared, around the corner pops a teacher with a "Please, will you cut a stencil?"

Miss Perry checks a student's hearing with the audiometer. This is part of the physical exam given to grades 11, 9, 7, etc.

Left: Mr. Miller concocts a French salad for his first year class. (He also makes good onion soup.) Center: Mr. and Mrs. Adams obligingly step outside for the photographers. Right: Mr. Beckley expounds on scientific matters. (Class or 3:40 Club?)

Miss Farlling, dean of girls, checks Kuder Preference Tests, preparatory to giving them to the freshmen. The results of these tests, sometimes quite surprising to the students, serve as guides in the selection of vocations.

Mr. H. Myers presides over study hall. With attendance ranging from ninety to two hundred, these sessions are sometimes quite trying to the patience of the person in charge. One "suggestion" from Mr. Myers is usually sufficient.

Left: A social five minutes after 3:40 for Miss Myers, Mrs. Kocsis, and Miss Clevenger in Room 5. Right: The lords of their domain, the shop—Mr. Landis and Mr. Yorks. The object of interest is the new combination saw recently acquired by the department.

Mr. Nitchkey explains Gettysburg history (at this particular moment, the significance of the peach orchard in the campaign) to the scouts on their trip to the Pennsylvania battlefield.

Mrs. Manifold does more than just "polish our pearls." While waiting for her next victim she catches up on some of her desk work.

Left: Mr. Frits presides over the ticket stand for basketball games. There seems to be a lull in the usual seven o'clock mad rush.
Right: Enjoying the daily noon hour period of relaxation in the library are Mrs. Kern, Miss Espenshade, Miss Heilman, Miss Keeports. This is the time to catch up on one's newspaper information.

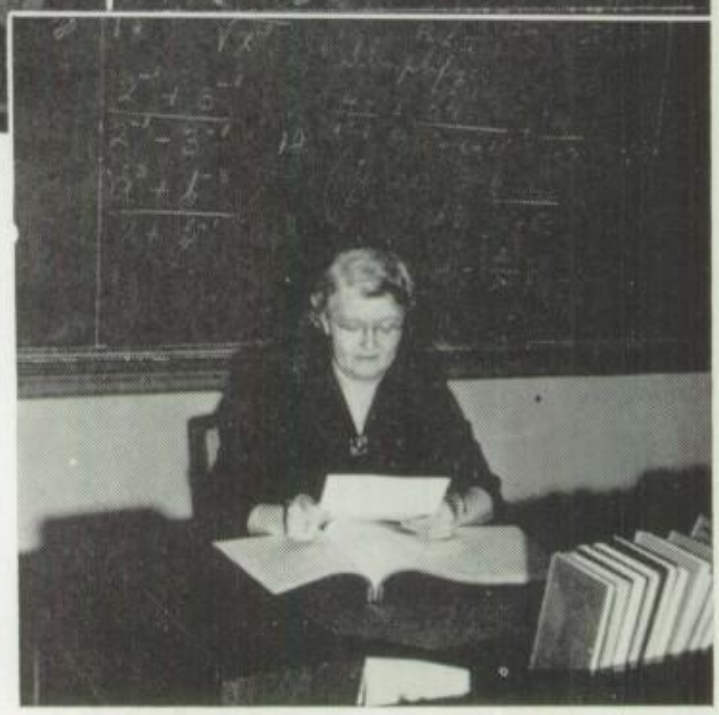
Miss Lesher retires to the library office to catalogue some new books.

Mr. Hangen enjoys a calm moment in study hall. Surrounded by all those vacant pews, he should be able to concentrate on his civics lesson (?) for the next period.



Miss Reiver in her fifth period session with the financial records. She is really busy keeping the finances for Lion, Hilltop, athletics, etc., etc., in working shape.

Mr. Smith in biology class. After substituting for Mr. Shoemaker during the first semester, he left R. L. H. S. to take up Boy Scout work.

Mrs. Swartz prepares to bake a new collection of student-made ceramic products in her kiln.

Mr. Surplus, the "maestro" himself, directs one of the several musical organizations. This particular brand of sign language is in evidence in 8b every day in the week.

Red Lion High School

Red Lion, Pennsylvania

Maybe our class didn't produce a second Dipie Walker or "Doc" Blanchard for R. L. H. S., but when it comes to sports you'll have to admit that our athletes did more than their share in raising their team's score. Some of the most remembered events didn't always happen in the actual game, however. For instance, Phil Golden was the center of attraction at the York County Track Meet. He leaped into the air, flew gracefully over the rail, and descended — into the mud!

Even mere rabbits can attract a lot of attention during a most exciting moment. At the North York baseball game last spring, a certain venturesome hare interrupted the game by journeying from third base to first, and then disappeared into the field. Rabbits can be so ignorant! Anyone knows you're supposed to go in the opposite direction.

Track . . . . .

And then came the spring! But what had happened to last fall's athletes? With the exception of the basketball players our fellows were beginning to get spring fever due to winter hibernation. The best tonic for this disease being a good workout directed by one of the track coaches, many of the boys reported for practice and could be seen struggling through their calisthenics. While Coach Myers slaved with the sprinters and distance runners, Mr. Beckley explained the correct form for high-jumping and weight throwing. The directions shouted by the coaches could be heard faintly above the laughs, discouraged groans, and panting of their proteges.

After a few weeks of this strenuous training the track team was finally chosen by process of elimination—or should it be termed "survival of the fittest?" The once stuffed-looking sweat suits were beginning to fit more loosely because of a much needed loss of protoplasm. This training paid off rather well in two meets which preceded the county meet. One with Delta was won by one point and the Lions also placed second in one with North York and West York.

Paules (sixth from left) and Wilkins (eighth) are off to a good start in the half-mile with competition from North York and West York. Wilkins placed second and Paules third.

Judging from the appearance of the track at Small's Athletic Field, the York County Meet on May 20 could have been either a swim meet or a track meet. The doubt was eliminated when the participants appeared, dressed in track suits and spikes. The muddy conditions were a great hindrance to the runners, but several of the jumpers scored quite a splash in their events. But soon the meet was over! The spectators filed out of the stands and plodded through the muck and mire to begin the journey to their respective homes.

As was the case last year, the North York team won the championship, but not before they were given quite a chase by the second-place Red Lion squad. Although the Lions were not the champs, they scored several outstanding victories, especially in the 440-yard dash and the mile relay, in which they showed their heels to the rest of the field.

Baseball . . . . .

The opponents were leading by the score of 4 to 2, with the Red Lion team at bat. The bases were loaded and the spectators were in a frenzy. Having checked the runners, the opposing pitcher threw the ball toward his catcher. But the unfortunate receiver never touched the ball. There was a crack and the horsehide sailed up, up, and away! When the dust finally cleared away there was nobody on base; the batter had hit a triple and had scored himself, on an error.

Exciting, wasn't it? Yet this was only one of many exciting incidents witnessed during the 1948 baseball season, which was one of the most successful in the history of Red Lion High School.

Combining the talents of their heavy sluggers with the reliable arms of their pitchers, the local team swept through the Northern Division with only one defeat, an extra-inning contest to North York, and won the pennant in impressive fashion. With several experienced lettermen as a backbone and a promising crop of rookies to help, Red Lion had again shown its superiority in this sport.

Kinard jogs off the field as Red Lion comes to bat. Looks like Babe Ruth, doesn't he?

Nevin Grim swings at a fast one from the Dover pitcher as the umpire prepares to call it.

Time out! The umpire's getting ready to sweep off home plate.

The Lions roared through a tough baseball schedule and won the Northern Division Championship. But that is only half of the story.

The never-say-die Lions were not satisfied with this pennant. They wanted something bigger and better! Since the county championship was scheduled between the Northern Division champions and the winner of similiar honors in the Southern Division, the Lions were eligible to enter this contest and play against the New Freedom nine.

As the two teams trotted onto the diamond, everyone was hoping for an exciting game. And what a contest it was! That poor horsehide took a merciless beating from the bats of the powerful hitters on both teams. It was a holiday for sluggers and a gloomy one indeed for the pitchers, as the final outcome indicated: Red Lion 15, New Freedom 11.

Football . . . . .

Although the 1948 football season was not an outstanding one, it certainly did have a story-book ending.

The Lions were expected to compile a good record and be contenders for the conference championship, but things did not turn out too well. In the first several games, the opponents seemed destined by fate to win over the Red Lion gridders. The coaches began tearing down the team, trying to get a winning combination together. Then something happened! The Lions finally won a game, scoring an impressive win over Columbia High School.

The stage was now set for the grand finale—the game with West York. And what a game it was! The Lions surprised everyone, including the favored Bulldog team, with a display of power which they had not matched all season.

Next year the coaches will lose some more hair because they will again be confronted with the problem of building up another new team.

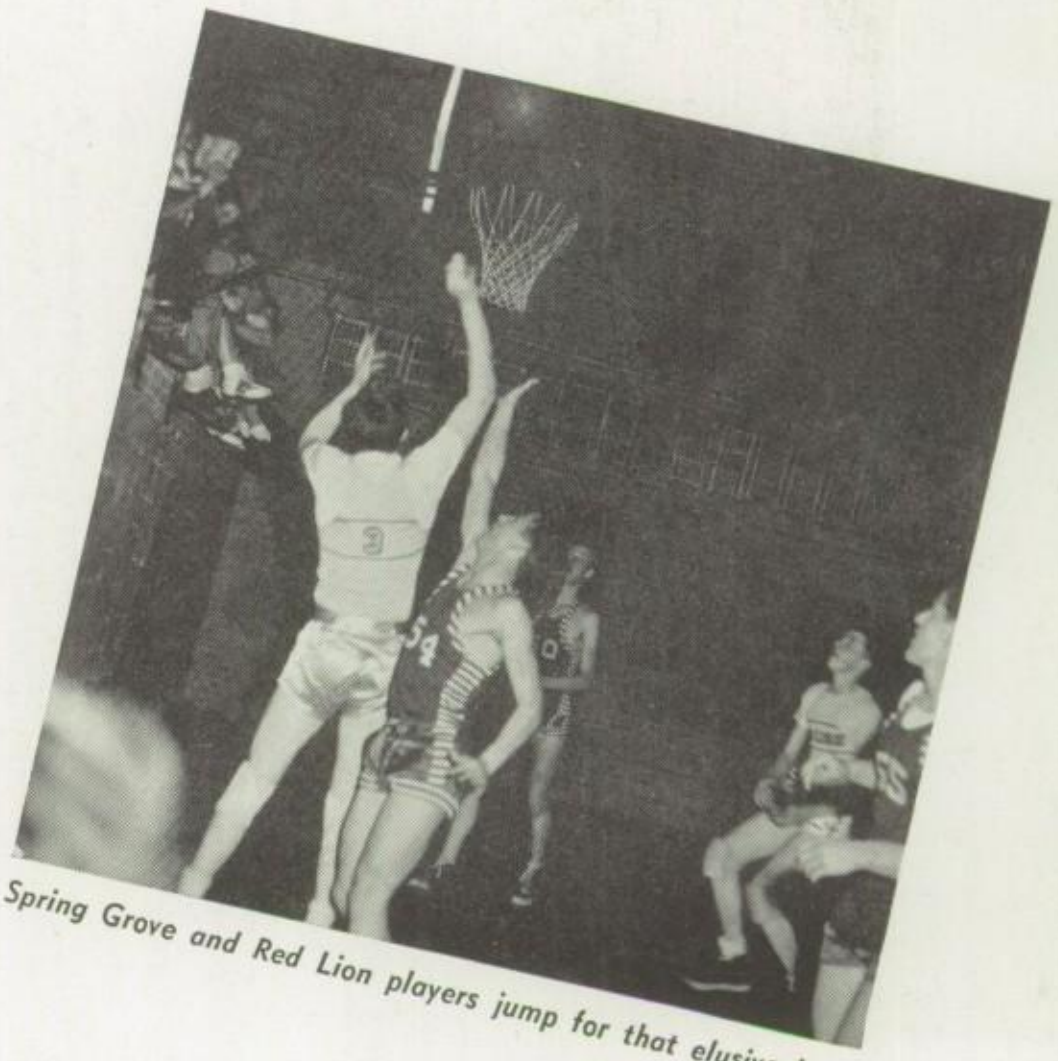
Basketball . . . . .

Red Lion High's basketball team rolled through its tough schedule like a well-oiled machine. The Lions came within one rung of being at the top of the ladder to the basketball championship, as they finished their season in a second place tie with Wrightsville. The Red Lion quintet subdued all of the opposition with the exception of Dallastown and the two jinx teams, York Catholic and North York, who handed Red Lion its only league defeats. After the regular season ended, the locals, best of the class A teams in the league, prepared to compete in a post-season playoff. Unfortunately, for the third successive year, they met their nemesis in the form of a strong Chambersburg team.

But this was not all of the basketball picture at R. L. H. S. The "little boys" in junior high also participated in this ever-popular sport, playing as an added attraction before the varsity games. Although not quite as successful as their seniors, they played good ball and won a majority of their games. This junior squad, as usual, served a dual purpose. First, it gave the younger boys a chance to compete with other teams and equally important, it was building the future varsity team.



Spring Grove and Red Lion players jump for that elusive ball.

Activity plus as the volleyball teams go into action.

Volleyball . . . . .

An innovation in our world of sports—a Red Lion High volleyball team. True, the game has been in evidence off and on for years, but only as part of the G. A. A. or intramural program. Under the coaching of Mr. Beckley, the team was developed to meet representatives from other schools.

When the first announcement was posted, stating that all fellows interested in volleyball were to report to the gym, a great many young hopefuls made a dash for the door. Then the work began. Practice sessions were held and the coach weeded out some of the poorer players. This process continued until the group, which had formerly been a group of high-strung boys, began to look like a volleyball team.

Being of such recent organization, the team had to rely on an indefinite schedule of games as the season progressed. This, however, proved of sufficient interest to acquire for the team a substantial following. Volleyball came to R. L. H. S. this year, and it definitely looks as though it is here to stay.

Intramurals . . . . .

No wonder Red Lion High School can display such a healthy, well-developed looking group of boys and girls! The intramurals, which consist of volleyball, basketball, and softball, give every student who is not on a regular school team a chance to develop his skill in athletics.

During the noon hour the gym is taken over by the non-resident athletes. This is done because many of the out-of-towners cannot remain after school to engage in sports. Although boys and girls both have a chance to participate, the boys nearly monopolize the time, for the girls have the gym during only one noon hour each week. The two prevalent games occurring in the gym are volleyball and basketball and they are played in the fall and winter. In the spring students' fancies turn to thoughts of softball. With two softball diamonds provided, the girls' teams and boys' teams may play their own games on a private field. Since all is fair concerning a place to play, the only thing that suffers is the library, which occasionally loses a window from the efforts of one of the powerful sluggers.

After school the resident boys may be found engaging in similar activities. The resident girls, however, must belong to the G. A. A. in order to take part in intramural sports. With fine sportsmanship and hard playing offered by each player, the competition is just as tough as in the non-resident games.

As the season rolls on and the cheering crowds urge their favorite teams to victory, there arises a necessity for playoffs to determine the champions. By process of elimination, the resident and non-resident leagues finally are reduced to one team each. Then comes the most significant contest of all—the champs meet the champs.

That the weaker sex of R. L. H. S. has also taken a big interest in sports, is clearly shown by the large number of girls that participate in the G. A. A. activities. During the fall and winter months on almost any Tuesday or Friday evening after school, these girls can be found in the gym playing volleyball and basketball, and, when spring rolls around, outdoors playing softball. Too, there is that other sport, swimming, which is a favorite with these lassies. The girls certainly have fun at the Y. W. C. A. on their weekly swimming jaunt every Thursday night for ten weeks.

There is keen competition in the games, because at the end of the tournament there is an all-star team chosen from each of the classes. At the end of the school year, when the time comes for sports awards, the girls who are in the top twenty per cent of the group participating receive letters. A girl may earn three letters—the first-year letter with one stripe, second year with two stripes, and the most cherished letter—chenille.

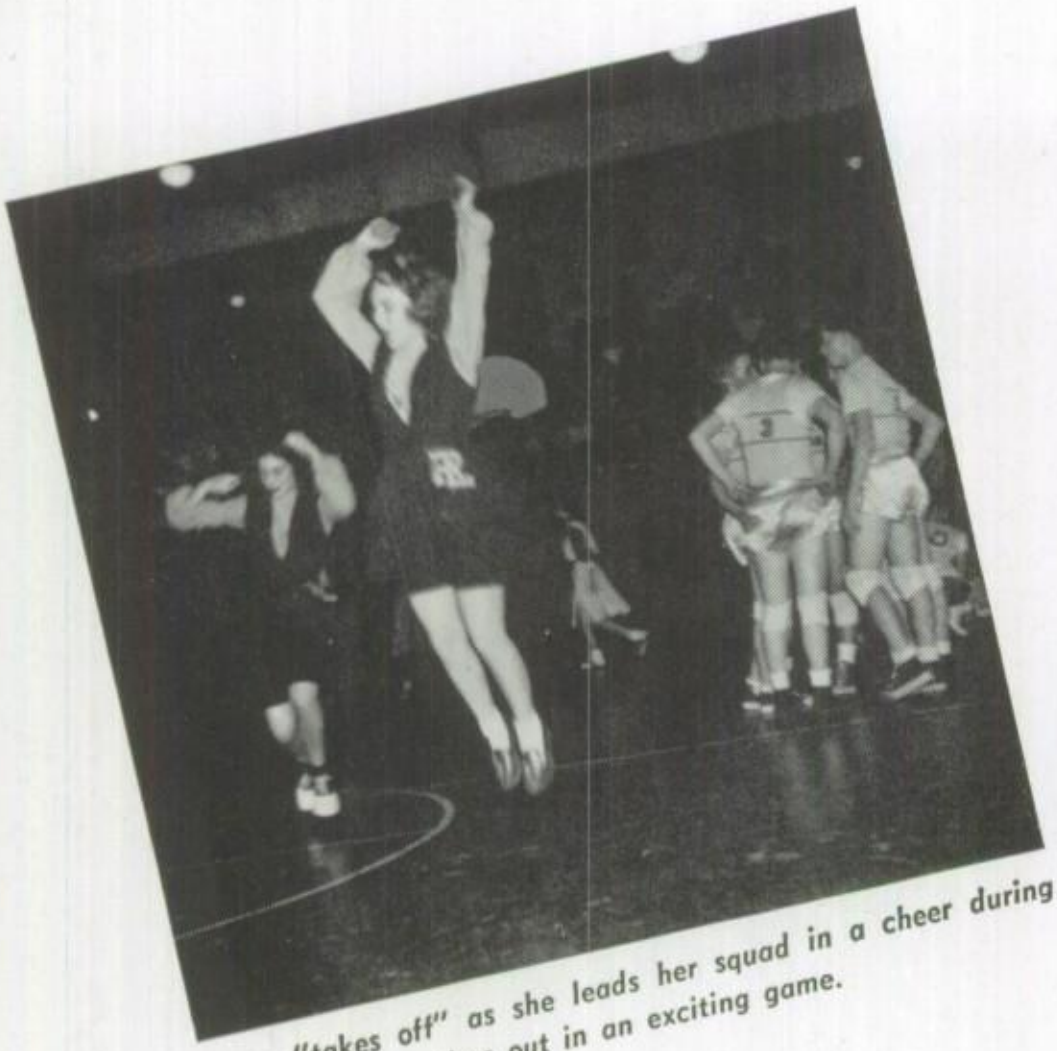
Cheerleading . . . . .



Joyce "takes off" as she leads her squad in a cheer during time out in an exciting game.

These vivacious girls in the gold and black uniforms are Red Lion's Cheerleaders. What would we do without them? They lead the crowd in pep songs and cheers at all football and basketball games. Regardless of the weather—if it be rain, snow, or sleet—our peppy girls will be out front backing up the team and cheering them on to victory. If we happen to be losing a game, they never give up hope, they just keep yelling with all their might telling the team that we won't let them down.

Red Lion is proud of its three squads of cheerleaders—the first squad, second squad, and the Little Lions. At the beginning of each school year try-outs are held to see who will secure positions on the squads. Selection is difficult, but by means of elimination it is finally accomplished. This year interest in cheerleading was so great that a fourth group was retained, whose sole aim was practice, practice and more practice. Under the direction of veteran cheerleaders, they hope some day to gain a coveted place on one of the squads.

Red Lion High School

Red Lion, Pennsylvania

We "forty-niners" seem to have acquired a great love for extra curricular activities. In fact, some of us have taken such a liking to them that we just barely find time to do our lessons.

During our four years of high school we have seen old organizations die and a lot more new ones born. It seems as though we contributed at least one member to each of them.

Of course, we aren't all participants. Some of us just go out and cheer until we sound like frogs (when we're really hoarse), to bolster the morale of our pals who are sweating over an intricate band formation. Or maybe we clap until our hands look like advertisements for a better soap in the dishpan, for the actors and actresses, who, when their make-up is removed, are just the kids who sit next to us in study hall or chemistry class.

Student Council . . . . .

This year Red Lion High gave birth to a new organization, the student council. Although the idea of a government by the students is still in the stage of infancy, the council has already learned to stand on its own two feet.

Their duties were accepted eagerly and range from those of a policeman to those of a governor. They have undertaken to improve traffic conditions in the hallways, and have done a fine job of it. At the door near the office, they placed a receptionist, who is on hand to supply visitors and students with guidance and information at any time during the day.

This group of faithful representatives provided a cheering section at the football games. They arranged and put across a presidential election with campaign speeches, parade, and all. In addition the council wrote a constitution (a very commendable one) and sponsored the evaluation assembly. With the support of the student body, this organization can strengthen the relations of students, teachers, and administration in the years ahead.

To most students the name Red Cross brings visions of digging into pockets and giving a share of meager allowances. It's surprising, however, to discover the many other tasks our homeroom representatives perform.

These students are divided into smaller groups and various projects are distributed among them. The F. H. A. committee was responsible for the making of stuffed toys, and for the baking of cookies to be sent to the Veterans' Hospital. The art committee reported that Mrs. Swartz had one hundred eleven Christmas cards made in her art classes, which were sent to Veterans' Hospitals for personal use. Still another committee sponsored the collection of used books to be placed in one of the rural schools serving Red Lion, thus starting a library for that school. The summarizing of articles which appeared in the Journal was completed by the Journal committee. These are only a few of the many achievements of this year. Certainly the 100% membership for R. L. H. S. is ample proof of the enthusiasm and ambition of these sponsors.

Magician's Club . . . . .

Abra-Cadabra! and presto, someone pulls a rabbit out of his hat. One never knows what is going to happen when the young prestidigitators get together each week under their capable instructor, Mr. Miller. Just imagine one of their meetings with everybody pulling tricks on everybody else—it must be a riot!

At first there are many slips and misses but after a few tries something is bound to happen (though only heaven knows what). After some of these pranksters learn a few tricks, they try them out on each other until they are perfected. They are then rewarded by appearing in an assembly program and displaying their "hidden" talents. When performing before an audience they also add some of their dry humor to help keep people awake, but never let it be said that a member of the Magician's Club is dull because he never can be found without something up his sleeve.

Craft Club . . . . .

For the benefit of the industrious few who like to work and build things, the Craft Club has again been organized. The only requirement for admittance into this organization is that the applicant be a member of either the junior or senior high school.

The most important type of work done by these energetic students is the building of models (the type with wheels, such as racing cars and airplanes). These pieces of handicraft, which the workers struggle very hard to make, combine the crudeness of handcarved wood with the sleek, streamlined effect of modern jet racers. In fact they have races in order to determine who made the best car. If one happens to remain in school after closing time on the right day, he needs only to look down. Yes, as incredible as it may seem, the halls of our alma mater even serve as a racetrack.

Safety Patrol . . . . .

The school patrol, a safety organization, should not be confused with the student council patrol which directs hall traffic. Although they have similar purposes, they are separate organizations and are under different supervision. The duties of the members of the school patrol are centered mainly about the younger students. After school is dismissed at noon and in the evening, they hold themselves responsible for the safety of their young schoolmates, as the mob descends upon them. In rain, sleet, and snow these junior policemen can be found at the intersections. With "Safety First!" as their motto, their small but mighty organization goes on protecting, directing, and perfecting. These boys are not only doing their bit by serving the school, but also are developing much needed leadership.

Stamp Club . . . . .

For anyone interested in joining an organization of philatelists this is the end of the trail; the search is over. (Note to the laymen: A philatelist is merely a collector of stamps.) Yes, believe it or not, R. L. H. S. even has a class for stamp collectors! Thanks to the interest of Miss Kostenbader, persons with a yen to collect now have an outlet for their energy.

During their regular meetings, the members of this organization trade stamps and in turn get some for their own collection. During free time, these students may be found searching for information in the library, at home, and elsewhere. A great many people have located old letters—a good source for finding interesting stamps. The pupils in this club have found it to be a pleasant as well as informative pastime.

Stagecraft Club . . . . .

Persons who attended the senior and junior plays undoubtedly noticed the stage settings. Some absent-mindedly just accepted them as scenery, but many were interested in knowing the hows and whats back of the arrangement. In spite of professional - product appearance, these backgrounds were constructed by a group of hard-working, non-union boys belonging to an organization known as the Stagecraft Club. Although the settings for "Doctor's Orders" and "Brother Goose" were the major tasks undertaken during the present school term, these masters of hammers and saws were called upon many times.

Whenever these workers get stuck, they call for their boss who in this case is Mr. Landis. The necessary instruction is given and it is back to work for the young laborers. Soon another piece of work is finished, but production does not cease. There is always more work to be done.

Being made up of two representatives from each of the four upper classes, chosen on the basis of interest, time, and ability, the group has a fine chance of progressive permanence from year to year.

Dramatic Club . . . . .

One of the younger clubs of R. L. H. S. is the senior high dramatic club composed of thirty-five members. These actors and actresses to-be meet on the second and fourth Tuesdays in the month. They are divided into different classes—stage crew, make-up, directing, and acting—with each and every one of them trying his skill at the different tasks. Also, Mr. Baldwin, organizer of the club, is teaching them the fundamentals of the stage, the proper etiquette on the stage, and the correct way to enter and exit. During the periods that they aren't acting and producing skits, they discuss the leading plays and the leading actors and actresses on Broadway.

The results of the hard work of this group are often shown in the short skits presented in the assembly programs. The experience gained by these dramatically inclined pupils can also be appreciated in the production of the annual class plays, for it saves the directors a considerable amount of trouble and the cast the usual stage-fright. For those who are not fortunate enough to make the cast, there are always those skits and weekly meetings to be remembered—and what could be more fun?

F. H. A. . . . . .

The motto of the Future Homemakers of America, "Toward new horizons," well applies to the chapter at Red Lion High. It seems as though these senior high girls are always looking for something new and different to help improve their already active group. During the Christmas season the fifty-six members spread joy and happiness by making cuddlesome stuffed toys for the Red Cross, by baking cookies for soldiers, and by singing Christmas carols at the homes of shut-ins. Approximately twenty of these ambitious girls attended the rally which was held at Spring Grove and presented an excellent program for the other members present. This year also brought the new experience of writing an edition of the club's county paper, the "Yoco Spotlight."

In order to get new ideas and make plans for the club, the president and an alternate member attend the executive meetings which are held each month at York. This scheme not only enables different girls to listen in on the discussions, but they can also contribute their own original ideas, thus making way for the latest in the line of inspirations.

Library Club . . . . .

If ever a student had any doubt as to the efficiency of the student librarians all he had to do was simply forget to return a book on time and he'd receive ample proof. This proof frequently arrived in the form of those familiar slips of paper that notified them of their tardiness.

Besides performing the routine tasks, these experts of the Dewey decimal system also formed the library club to mix a little social life with their work. They planned a tea for their mothers, a hike, and held their annual Christmas party. A Truth or Consequences assembly, which was not only entertaining but educational as well, was presented by them. Considering all these activities, one can truthfully say that the girls have a full schedule.

Biology Club . . . . .

One of the latest additions to R. L. H. S. in the line of clubs is in the Biology Department. This year, Mr. William Smith, substitute biology teacher, started an organization for the students who have that fiendish desire to dissect poor, innocent victims. This group of dissectors scheduled meetings every Wednesday after school—but usually minus their carving tools, since the dissecting of a cat was only one of the projects they planned to tackle. The list of activities to which they were looking forward included field trips, lectures given by a psychologist, and the making of charts and posters concerning biological subjects, of course!

Hilltop . . . . .

While sitting and reading the school newspaper, the Hilltop, how many readers have ever considered how much time and energy is spent in preparing it? Writing articles, proof-reading, pasting them on the dummy, and finally sending them to York to be printed isn't all fun. There are deadlines that must be met; all articles must be in before a certain day or the high-command (editor, to you) will be after your neck. Our eight-page paper is presented monthly, and in it is given the latest news of R. L. H. S. and of the town itself. The sophomore and junior journalism classes both have the privilege of editing one of the editions, the others being done by seniors with aid from the rest.

But as the saying goes—All work, and no play, makes Jack a dull boy. So, each year the journalism groups sponsor a dance and go to great lengths to make it a novel affair. This year they decided to have the dance before Easter, and for a portion of the program held an Easter parade, complete with boardwalk, baby carriages, hats, and the like. Different, eh what?

Sophomore Journalism . . . . .

The first step toward being a member of the Hilltop Staff is the sophomore journalism class. These beginners learn the "how and why" of newspaper writing — the importance of deadlines, the five W's, facts rather than imagination, and selection of interesting leads. Searching for correct and different verbs for headlines is one of their major tasks.

Their instructor, Miss Farlling, hands out criticism, compliments, and assignments. Oh, yes, the assignments — these may range anywhere from an editorial to a short poem for the feature page. Of course, not all these articles pass inspection, for only the better ones are accepted for publication in the Hilltop. One can easily tell when a soph's article has been considered acceptable, because from the moment the school papers arrive these journalists nearly burst with the anticipation of seeing their own fruits of labor in black and white.

Lion . . . . .

In the spring of 1948 a group of juniors gathered in Room 5 for a business meeting. These students, who had just been selected as members of the staff for the 1949 "Lion," were making preliminary plans for their yearbook.

Before long, September rolled around and it was time for serious work. The photographers had been taking pictures for months and had hundreds of them on hand. The lay-out editors nearly lived in the Activity Office as they drew up the general plan of the book and mounted pictures. The editorial staff wrote and handed in their first writings. They breathed a sigh of relief but it was a short-lived rest as back came the papers with helpful hints and comments, such as "more pep" or "material good," written on them. The deadline was rapidly approaching! This staff hastily wrote and rewrote their articles as they raced Father Time. Finally, the struggle was over; the dummy was ready.

The business staff went into action in October and acquired sufficient orders to necessitate a publication number of 1,500 copies. Then back to the job in May, for theirs was the task of distributing the finished product.

Lay-out editors, Joanne Inners and Kenneth Roth, and the co-editors, Nevin Trout and Lois Paulhamus, concentrate their efforts on the dummy for the printer.

Social Activities Committee . . . . .

Old social activities committees never die; they just fade away—or else they merge with another organization. That is what is gradually happening to the one at R. L. H. S., for the student council has taken over many of the S. A. C.'s duties. However, since the student council was just starting to organize its activities at the beginning of the year, this committee still carried on its traditional functions, turning over its responsibilities one by one until most of them were absorbed by the new group.

These class representatives didn't waste any time when it came to starting their program. During the second week of school they held their first meeting, and decided there and then that, in addition to entire-school events — the traditional Christmas, Valentine and Football Dances —each class could sponsor a dance for its own members only. Evidence of the popularity of this idea were the Sophomore Hop, the Senior Sock Hop, the Freshman Get-Acquainted Party, and similar social events.

Sr. Hi Mixed Chorus . . . . .

To many high school students Monday morning is the prelude to blue day. However, the horrors of Monday mornings don't seem to affect the peppy members of the senior chorus, for on that day promptly at 8:30 some sixty vocal enthusiasts collect in the auditorium where they combine their talents in producing some first-class music. The chorus is composed of twenty-seven girls and thirty-three boys.

Straining their vocal chords through many practice periods they prepare for the climax of the year, the annual Night of Music. Besides participating in the Night of Music, the mixed chorus adds color to various other programs. For the Christmas program a group brought out the holiday spirit with their singing of carols.

A few members had a grand time taking part in the York County Music Festival. At this time those lucky people not only missed an afternoon of school for rehearsal but also met students from other schools and furthered their knowledge of music.

Sr. Hi Girls' Chorus . . . . .

It's new! Different! Yes, during the year a new organization was added to the music department. Making its debut was the senior high girls' chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Dorothy Adams. Glancing into the auditorium on Thursday, one often could see Mrs. Adams with her loyal female followers as they learned proper breathing and voice projection. From this group several special choruses, trios, etc., have been made up for concert work.

Jr. Hi Glee Club . . . . .

Under the direction fo Miss Florence Spangler, the sixty vocalists who comprise the junior high glee club learn the do, re, me's of group singing. This organization provides excellent training for the future members of the senior high mixed chorus. Who knows, perhaps an unsuspected crooner or opera star is in our midst. If so, one has a chance to be discovered at the two highlights of the year, the Night of Music and the York County Music Festival.

Senior Band . . . . .

Football season opened with a bang this past fall with the largest marching band in the history of our high school. The sixty-piece band performed many intricate drills and formations before fascinated though somewhat bewildered spectators. The double wheels and also the cog wheels were enjoyed as much by the band members as by their audience. In rain or shine, through mud or dust, our loyal group was on hand to provide entertainment with a comic stunt, or to bolster morale with a formation such as Win R. L.

After polishing their shoes and cleaning the dust and dirt of the football field from their instruments, the band members were ready to begin rehearsal for the annual Night of Music. Senior soloists showed signs of nervous strain weeks before the concert, as they practiced to perfect their numbers.

The outdoor concert held each spring in Fairmount Park was the last performance of the band for the year. Seniors played as they had never played before, realizing that never again would they appear as members of the Red Lion High School Band.

his organization whose members always seem repared with a joke or wise remark for the naestro, hold their weekly meeting during the uesday activity period. Mastering gradually ne technique of keeping fiddles in tune and ne general harmonizing of the various instruments, the ensemble has prepared a repertoire roviding anything from a "Cossack Dance" to ne "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin.

Junior Band . . . . .

Serving as a stepping-stone to the senior band, the junior organization teaches the young instrumentalist the necessary band technique. Meeting regularly every Thursday morning during activity period, these young hopefuls eagerly work toward their concert near the end of the school year, and look forward to future participation in the senior band program.

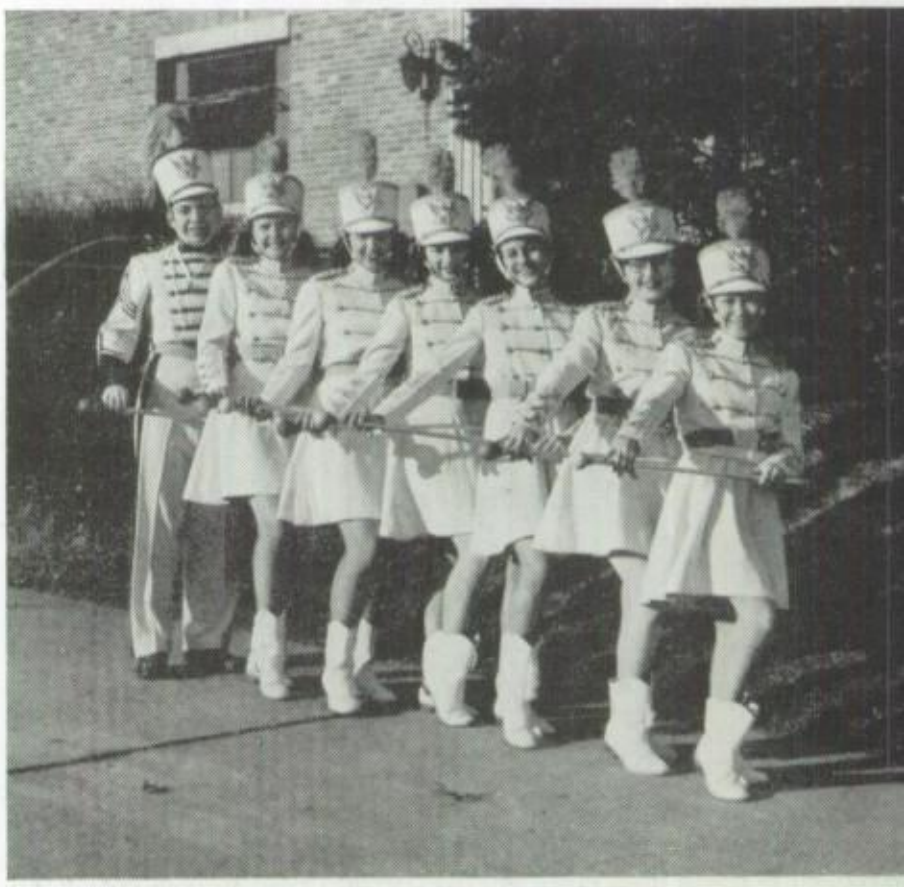
Twirlers . . . . .

Believing in the old saying that practice makes perfect, our twirlers begin early in the fall to perfect their routines. It is quite a job to think of something new for every football game, but someone usually has a "brainstorm." The twirlers are called upon not only to entertain the spectators with their high stepping and baton technique, but also help in band formations. This year they even formed the clapper in the bell, and worked up a few calisthenics.

Toward the end of the football season, they undertook the coaching of a new group of twirlers, the miniaturettes from the grade school.



TWIRLERS—Bill Meads, Dorcas LaMotte, Flo Slenker, Darlene Shoff, Alta Burg, Janet Thornton, JoAnn Snyder.

Dance Band . . . . .

Consisting of only fourteen members, the dance band makes up in pep and enthusiasm what it lacks in size. For a "new look" this year, their stands were cut down and repainted a light shade of grey with gold and black decorations.

Providing music not only for our dances, these young swingsters often journey to far away places to furnish sentimental or jivey moods for social functions of other schools. Early in the year they went to Stewartstown, and in November provided music for the York-Adams County Press Conference. This is the fourth year that the dance band has played for this conference dance. The holiday season found the band rather busy. They were engaged by West York High for their Christmas Dance. Then came jobs with Manchester and Delta and a return trip to West York High for the Valentine Dance. As spring rolled around again, their schedule included the Delta Junior Prom and the New Freedom Prom.

Color Guard . . . . .

As the steady beat of the drums is heard from the approaching band, the first to be noticed is the color guard. With rhythmic step they head the parade, as, dressed in their gold and black uniforms, they march down the middle of the street or across the football field. Two of the guards carry white guns while the other three support the American flag, the school flag, and the state flag.

During football season the color guards began to realize the great amount of time which the band puts into a formation to make it a success. Several mornings a week they wore their shoe soles thin as they practiced with the band. The amount of work was worth the excellent results. The color guards certainly add something to the appearance of the band.

National Athletic Scholarship Society . . . . .

One of the most important organizations which Red Lion High has to offer to the sports-minded boy is the National Athletic Scholarship Society. Admittance to this organization is an indication of good standing in sports, scholastic progress, and commendable citizenship. The boy may meet these qualifications by attaining a letter in at least one sport and showing good sportsmanship on the athletic field. He must also have a scholastic level which is above average and possess outstanding traits of citizenship. A boy with only one of these traits is not eligible, for his scholastic grades are just as important as his athletic career.

Of this year's membership only two are veterans of last year's society. The members, however, must renew their qualifications each year to remain on the roster and in this way are encouraged to do better work each year.

Nat'l Honor Society . . . . .

With quivering candles and shaky signatures another group of upperclassmen experienced that thrilling sensation of being included in the initiation program of the National Honor Society. Each year a few members from the junior and senior classes who have lived up to the requirements of the society are added to its roll. This year twelve seniors and seven juniors were eligible for this honor.

Scholarship, leadership, character, and service are the principles upon which the Red Lion chapter of the National Honor Society is founded. Miss Keeports serves as chairman for the organization. Members are chosen by a committee composed of the faculty and approved by the supervising principal. Being elected to this organization is one of the greatest honors which can be bestowed upon a high school student.

Although the society is mainly on honorary rather than active status, Orientation Day finds the members of the N. H. S. very busy. It is their traditional duty to help make the visitors from outlying school districts feel at home, and to serve as guides during the day.

With shaky hands new members of the honor society sign their names on the scroll.

The Lion 1949 Annual of

Red Lion High School

Red Lion, Pennsylvania

Our school year is packed full of incidents that are chalked up as part of the R. L. H. S. routine, but when the special big moments arrive, we like to put our best foot forward. You can imagine Gloria Kline's embarrassment, then, when she was acting as waitress at the Spring Frolic. She made a perfect three point landing streuling dainty little potato chips over the floor as she went.

Anyone in our senior play could tell you how Mapine Weiser rushed around back-stage when she changed clothes for her next appearance and then, suddenly, it dawned on her. She didn't have to change this time—so, back to the dressing room she went. A moment later she could be seen running toward the stage entrance, zipping her skirt as she ran.

X-Ray . . . . .

Before the football season was very far underway, the seniors and football players were confronted with more picture seekers. This time, however, they were going to get something free —a chest X-ray. Since the York Fair was in session that week, the mobile X-ray unit used at the fair was sent to Red Lion by the York County Tuberculosis Society. This new method of getting an X-ray proved to be rather novel to the students, as many of their remarks suggested. Although X-rays are expensive they are generously offered to the students because health is really the first objective of education.

Freedom Train . . . . .

Early in the fall a train filled with a valuable cargo roared into the York Fair Grounds. No, it was not time for the annual York Fair; this was the world-famous Freedom Train coming to York, the one-time capital of the United States.

Thanks to the local B. P. O. E., many students, who otherwise wouldn't have had a way of getting to York, were given the privilege of seeing the historical documents. Most people agree that the long hours of waiting in line, the headaches, sore feet, and numerous other ailments, were well justified.

"All aboard—" they're off to see the "Freedom Train." Top: Adults engineering the excursion. Bottom: The lucky kids!

The quartet about to leave for their next engagement.

Deep River Quartet . . . . .

A sure and pleasant cure for anyone who dislikes assemblies was this entirely different program presented by the Jubilee Quartet. From the time they came onto the stage until they left, their audience listened in amazement. The harmoniously blended voices at work on a negro spiritual, Dixieland ballad, or popular song seemed to reap an abundant crop of smiles and applause every time. An occasional joke or dramatic gesture from one of the members helped to vary the program and was always certain to get a few laughs. There was sufficient evidence to prove that their display of talent was fully appreciated, for as they left the stage singing their theme song, "Deep River," they received enough applause to bring them back for three encores.

Football Dance . . . . .

The G. A. A. came through with flying colors again (gold and black, of course) when they sponsored this year's football dance, the annual affair which opens the social season for senior high and puts a gala finale to the football season.

According to custom, at this time the G. A. A. members made public their choice of varsity player to be the "football king." Wayne Heim, one of the team's co-captains, was so honored to wear the 1948 crown.

Besides dancing to the music of Red Lion High's versatile dance band and stuffing themselves with the delicious refreshments, the party-goers laughed until they were breathless at the antics of the performers. Everyone present couldn't help but enjoy this excellent program, which was presented in honor of His Majesty, the King of Football. A feature of the entertainment was the skit by majorettes and cheerleaders, alias senior varsity members, and the football players, otherwise known as G. A. A. members.

Senior Play . . . . .

The doctor's orders were to see "Doctor's Orders." Yes, it is more than a possibility that a great many people who were feeling down in the dumps were advised by their physicians to have some good, hearty laughs. The best way to fill this prescription was to see the senior play, a hilarious three-act comedy presented on November 11, 12, and 13. The mad antics of the actors and actresses caused everyone from Junior to Grandad to emit chuckles and outbursts of laughter.

The play was successful not only because it was a hit with the audience, but it was also very favorable from a financial outlook, which is an important angle to consider. Yes, the senior treasury was fattened because of the success of the play. This certainly has been of great assistance in the ever-increasing expenses of the class.

Credit is given where credit is due, and a great deal of it certainly goes to those two patient teachers who directed the play, Miss Farling and Mr. Baldwin. Anyone who has ever tried to make actors and actresses out of a group of shouting, energetic seniors will agree that these people did an outstanding job.

When the final curtain rang down on "Doctor's Orders" there was a great deal of shouting and back slapping by everyone, not only those who were on the stage, but also the various committees, the usherettes, and the stage crew. These people were the unheralded heroes and heroines of the play and their work was indeed meritorious.

Stanley Ross, Spotlight On Latin America . . . . .

In the latter part of October, the students had the privilege of hearing and seeing Mr. Stanley Ross. Throughout Latin America Mr. Ross is known for his writings in over five hundred newspapers, and in the United States for his unique Latin American stories in our magazines. His career has provided him with many opportunities to chat with all kinds of people, from peons to presidents. Shortly before his appearance in our assembly, Mr. Ross returned from one of his tours south of the border and therefore he had some recent experiences to relate. His comments on Latin American characteristics and customs kept several hundred students attentively listening through what seemed to them a very short lecture.

Election . . . . .

Have you ever noticed how many people assume the profession of a politician near election time? Well, in school there are just as many politically minded people as anywhere else. This year the student council and social science department agreed to hold a presidential election with all the trimmings. Everyone desiring to vote had to register at his proposed polling place, previous to the election, of course. In order to complete the scene Mr. Frits sponsored a political rally that really brought the house down. After the building finally stopped trembling, the election was held, but something went wrong. Mr. Truman was defeated.

Evaluation . . . . .

The long-awaited day, December 7, finally rolled around. Every student and teacher tried to act as natural as possible, but yet there seemed to be a sort of what-shall-I-expect air throughout the school. It was the first day of evaluation and there were two more similar days to follow. During this period the evaluating committee observed everything possible in order to determine whether or not our school was accredited. With "best foot forward" as the aim, everyone cooperated unusually well to give the visitors a favorable impression of our alma mater. Of this we're very proud—in addition to the hoped-for rating, the committee was quite impressed with the loyalty of the students and the spirit of Red Lion.

Jr. Poetry Broadcast . . . . .

December 8—and a few juniors in the front of Room 12. As this group of talented students prepared to read their masterpieces in metrical language, they seemed to be somewhat nervous. However, this was excusable for they were reading under quite unusual conditions. Mr. Zaner, the poet scout, was on hand to make a broadcast of this verse, and the evaluating committee was investigating the classroom activities (unfortunately the latter missed this opportunity).

Inasmuch as the poems read were a by-product of her English classes, Miss Keeports made her debut on the Poet Scout program in this special in-the-classroom broadcast.

Dinner is served! The evaluators receive their quota of calories in the home economics room.

Ray Zaner, Poet Scout, brings his microphone into the classroom for a program by Gloria McCue, Dorcas LaMotte, Nancie Grove, Flo Slenker, Sara Brown, Dorcas Stitely, James Flinchbaugh, and Carole Hostler.

Christmas . . . . .

And before we knew it, Christmas was here! A little crepe paper here and a few wreaths there, plus the partly hidden mistletoe, brightened the homerooms and prepared R. L. H. S. for the jolly season. There were even a few trees all dressed up in their shiny tinsel and colored lights, ready to impart the Yuletide spirit to all the students.

Busy juniors scurried about making preparations for the annual Christmas dance. They planned a snappy program and lavishly decorated the gym. All these activities were performed in the same hurried, yet care-free, manner so typical of Christmas time.

Even the last day of school before the longest and most loved vacation was jammed full of things to do. There were the homeroom parties, the play, and the caroling in the halls. Finally, the last bell rang and the cheerful words "Merry Christmas" echoed and re-echoed throughout the building.

Sr. Poetry Broadcast . . . . .

On January 15, a few seniors sat at home by their radios and heard their own voices reading their own original poetry. This phenomenon was a result of the journey of the 12A class to station WSBA back in December when they made the recording. The entire class had been invited because the students were writing a modern version of the "Canterbury Tales" and Mr. Zaner, the poet scout, thought that this unusual interest in poetry merited a special invitation to the studio. For variety on his program he chose eight different personalities, each of which was portrayed in verse by a student.

Miss Farlling introduces and Lucille Grove leads off with the reading of the modern "Canterbury Tales."

White Hussar Symphonic Brass Quartet . . . . .

Attired in trim white and gold uniforms, the Hussars presented a colorful program of music. This organization, whose poise and coordination of movement was remarkable, was composed of two trombonists, a cornetist, and a pianist.

Students seemed to enjoy the various types of music presented. The ensemble rendered not only serious music but also seemed to enjoy doing comic things as well. The accompanist shared honors with the Hussars by winning the approval of the audience with her rendition of Chopin's "Polonaise."

D. Warner, Organist . . . . .

What a pleasant surprise! On the morning of Friday, February 4, students and teachers reporting as usual to the auditorium for assembly were greeted with the tones of an electric organ. Nothing could have been more enjoyable than the program of organ music which followed, presented by Mr. Donald Warner, a graduate of Red Lion High.

After opening his program with Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys," Mr. Warner began to explain the mechanism of his electric organ. He demonstrated the various stops and methods of tone production to bring about different tonal effects. The chiming of a clock could be heard in his snappy rendition of "Three O'clock in the Morning." "Tico Tico" brought forth a tremendous amount of applause from the audience. The climax of the program, however, was George Gershwin's ever-popular "Rhapsody in Blue."

What more could be needed for a successful assembly program, but Donald Warner, his organ, and his music.

Junior Play . . . . .

Believe it or not, but this year's Junior Class chose a comedy instead of a mystery for their annual play! This was indeed an oddity, and a great many people were asking, "Do you think the juniors will present a comedy as good as the thrill-packed mysteries of previous years?" Anyone who saw the play on February 24, 25, or 26 will answer a definite "yes" to that question.

As for the play itself, it was entitled "Brother Goose" and the plot was centered about Brother Goose, a fellow who tried to take care of his brother, his two sisters, and everything else around the home, without even a wife to help him. Of course this led to innumerable troubles and headaches for that poor man.

The juniors certainly earned their success as they had been practicing steadily since the tryouts of several weeks before. Yes, these actors and actresses had rehearsals night after night and week after week until they knew each line perfectly. Miss Keeports was greatly responsible for the success of the play, as she kept encouraging and helping the students to learn their actions as well as their speeches. Too, there were the various committees: the publicity committee placed posters in windows throughout the town as their contribution; the usherettes showed people to their seats; the stage crew made a bright and cheery living-room out of the old stage; and the make-up committee did a really colorful job.

Valentine Dance . . . . .

The gala event, the crowning of the King and Queen of Hearts, was, as usual, a great success. Many came to see their coronation, which was performed in the traditional manner by last year's royal couple. Their majesties were attended by the Prince and Princess of Hearts, chosen by the junior high the week before.

After receiving their crowns, the King and Queen were entertained by the nimble court dancers, Shirley Schnetzka and Alice Snyder. The gossipy Duchess Marsteller arrived in time to inform their royal highnesses of the latest happenings in their kingdom. The development of Valentine Day customs was presented in a skit, and was followed by an imitation of Rose Murphy by Kenneth Kurtz. Following the program, as is the usual custom, their majesties led the first dance. Cupid reigned as the couples glided smoothly around the gym floor, to the soft music of R. L. H. S.'s dance band.

The king and queen of hearts, Phil Golden and Patsy Spangler, receive their crowns from the 1948 sovereigns.

Night of Music . . . . .

After weeks and weeks of rehearsal the night arrived at last—the Night of Music. Taking part in this really topnotch program were the senior band, mixed chorus, girls' chorus, junior high glee club, and the grade school choir. Soloists were three members from the senior class.

A snappy march played by the band got the program off to a flying start. From there the audience was transported to the classical setting of Haydn and then to the more recent nineteenth century to hear themes from Tschaikovsky's "Pathetique." Selections from the "Gayne Ballet" by Shostokovitch, and "Rhythms of Rio" brought the program up-to-date. The choruses added variety to the entertainment with their choice of songs. The grand finale for this evening with music was "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" done Fred Waring style by the combined forces of band and choruses.

Just as the combined choruses fill the front of the auditorium, their voices fill the whole building in the grand finale.

Prospective freshmen listen attentively as Mr. Kulp and Mr. Moore explain the curriculum of R. L. H. S.

Orientation Day . . . . .

There comes a day each spring on which our peaceful school is stormed by regiments of rural eighth graders. At first glance this appears to be mass confusion, but actually it is Orientation Day. After the visitors are registered they are assembled into a group wherein they begin the day's scheduled activities. Several members of the National Honor Society are assigned to small groups of these future frosh and they have the privilege of directing them to their scheduled destinations. In the course of the day they hear lectures, look around, and get a general taste of high school life. A very influential feature of the day, however, is the delicious cafeteria meal —and to them it's free.

Easter . . . . .

When signs of spring began to appear in nature as well as in the schoolroom, Easter was certain to be near. Several weeks before this holiday arrived, however, some of the students and teachers were working hard to prepare a special program for the annual Easter Assembly. The result—an impressive program in which several students told in a few words the value of certain subjects in a well-rounded life, and then formed a cross with candles. With this impressive scene in mind, the students and faculty left for the second largest vacation of the year.

Glenn L. Norris . . . . .

As a balm to the overworked brains of the students of R. L. H. S., the assembly schedule for early spring included a popularized science demonstration with Mr. Glenn L. Norris as the featured entertainer. Working with all sorts of strange looking gadgets, Mr. Norris offered a show distinctly different and definitely educational. His main topic dealt with radio, and using a student for the pilot, he demonstrated the importance of being "on the beam" in "blind flying."

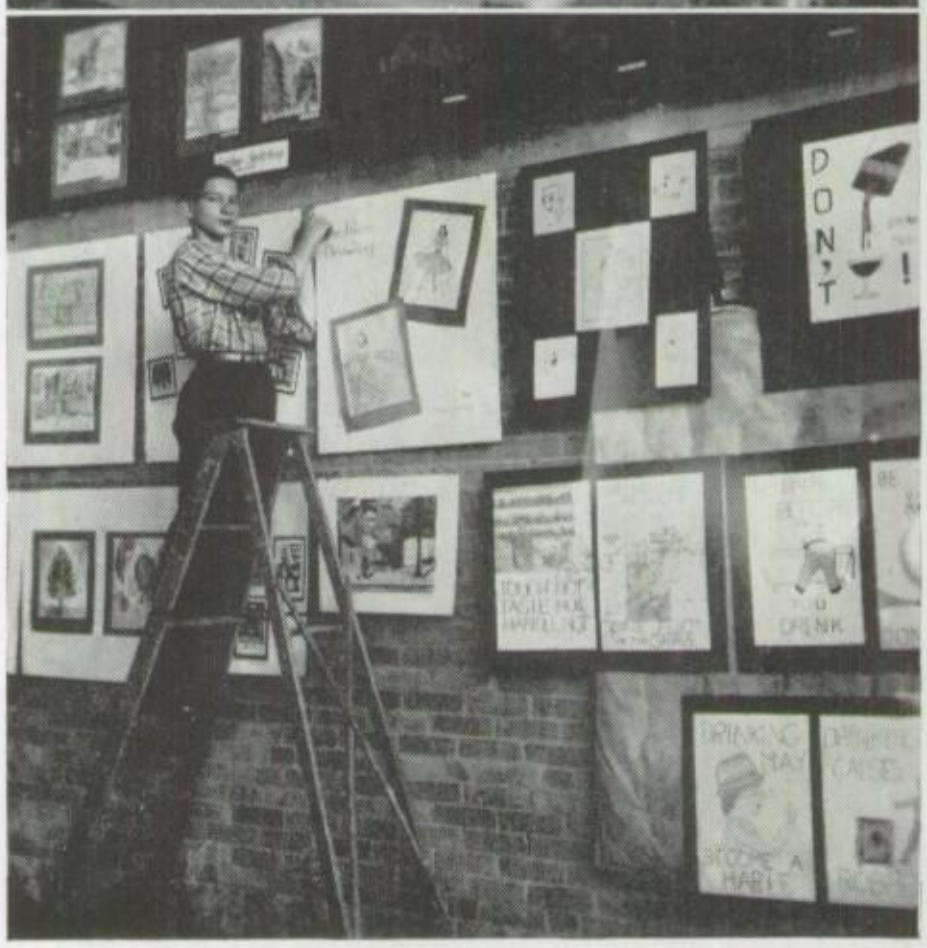
The Masons . . . . .

At the time of going to press, students were anticipating the May 24 assembly featuring Harry and Marie Mason and their Natureland. Both are experts when it comes to training pets. They have collected specimens in Alaska, Mexico, the Philippines, and all the Western States. Reptiles, birds, and eight different types of monkeys and baboons combine to present an unusual program of "monkey business at its best"—a program which held the untiring interest of all the students.

Art Exhibit . . . . .

The walls of dear old Red Lion High's gym were gaily decorated. No, not with crepe paper, in preparation for a party or dance, but with the masterpieces of our future de Vincis.

Everything from soup to nuts, or shall we say ceramics to charcoals, was included in this colorful display. Water colors, block prints, pen and ink sketches, and many other mediums done by the talented pupils proved to visitors that art students from kindergarten to twelfth grade were not only interested in their work, but they knew how to go about doing it.



Top: Two interested students inspect the masterpieces of R. L. H. S. artists.

Bruce Olphin arranges the array of posters for the art exhibit.

Susan Anstine and Mary Grove help to distribute the yearbooks as seniors line up to receive their allotment and delivery lists.

Yearbook Arrival . . . . .

The big day had come at last! Yes, after many weeks of waiting the Lions had finally arrived. The underclassmen were suffering from bad nerves as they painfully sat in their classes, waiting for their yearbooks to be distributed. Meanwhile the seniors had been strutting about bragging of the beautiful handicraft which they had produced. But who can blame them. It was an outstanding book, with its striking maroon cover, original sketches on divider pages, and the novel idea of original poetry by the editor-in-chief. Besides, it is only human nature to admire one's own work, isn't it?

Junior-Senior Prom . . . . .

Late in the spring after the seniors had finished their exams and before the juniors had begun theirs, the gala event of the year, the Junior-Senior prom, was held. On that particular day the tenseness and lack of concentration in their classes was conspicuous (diagnosed by teachers as receiving line jitters).

Having arrived at our little promenade, however, the dancers soon were put in the mood for an enjoyable evening by the gay Dutch decorations — the wooden shoes, the windmill, and the scenes in each corner of the room.

Commencement . . . . .

Is it the beginning or the end? For every senior, commencement exercises mean the end in only one respect; the end of his school days at R. L. H. S. As for the beginning, it's the beginning of a successful or unsuccessful future, depending on the student himself. No matter who the student is—an athlete, an honor student, or the practical joker of the class—he will never forget or regret his experience and education at Red Lion High.

The two traditional events which mark the end of high school for the seniors fall in early June. The Baccalaureate service is scheduled for the Bethany E. U. B. Church with the Rev. J. Stewart Glen as speaker. Because of the unusually large number of seniors, the commencement exercises will be observed in St. Paul's E. U. B. Church. Those people who are fortunate enough to attend the exercises will hear the address delivered to the seniors by Dr. Carroll S. Champlin, Professor of Education at Pennsylvania State College. As these seniors, with diploma and class flower in hand, turn in their caps and gowns, a hundred and forty-seven names will be added to the roster of R. L. H. S. alumni.

The Lion ... 1949 ... Annual of

Red Lion High School

Red Lion, Pennsylvania

Time is running short and we must busy ourselves with the duties of every senior: planning commencement exercises, a class day program, and sponsoring various social functions, plus all the little extra jobs that are given us. We won't be too busy, however, to realize the fact that next year we'll be starting from the beginning again, as under classmen in the big, big, world (so they tell us, anyway!)

Sincerely,

The Class of '49

Seniors . . . . .

Back in the year 1945, one hundred ninety-six uncertain freshmen invaded Red Lion High. Now, seventy-five per cent of those freshies are completing their busiest and most enjoyable year of school life—their senior year.

Ah yes, the sophisticated seniors—well, they're seniors anyway. However, a few may occasionally be caught day-dreaming when they're supposed to be translating French, or telling jokes when they're supposedly working on chemistry formulas. Could it be that they aren't as smooth and suave as they pretend to be?

Be that as it may, June 7 marks the final milestone of active life at R. L. H. S. for the Class of 49. For some, it will mean the end of classes and the beginning of "on-your-own;" for others, the stepping-stone to higher training; for all, happy memories of R. L. H. S.
